

Visa.

A founder's case for adding outbound mobility to the Philippine Creative Industries framework.

BASIS	PSA Creative Economy data · RA 11904 / PCIDP MC 103 · a decade of personal advocacy
ASK	An IRR amendment, a Senate hearing, or a Creative Workers Mobility Act
SCALE	₱2.12T economy · 7.51M workers · 30% U.S. visa denial rate
AUDIENCE	Sen. Paolo Benigno "Bam" Aquino IV · for policy review and partnership

Creative is the second-largest sector by workforce in the country.

7.51 million Filipinos work in creative industries — already four times the BPO workforce, approaching agriculture in scale. ₱2.12T value, comparable to OFW remittances.

THE ASYMMETRY

U.S., Korean, and Japanese artists enter the Philippines visa-free.

Filipino artists going the other way: 3-month process, $185 fee, embassy interview, provincial travel — for a 30% chance of refusal.

Touring artists must apply simultaneously.
One delay drops a city.

Korea's culture spend rose sixfold in three years — then Hallyu broke globally.

South Korean government spending on cultural industries, USD millions. The Philippines is already at Korea's current GDP share — without comparable state investment.

Filipino artists put their visa frustration on a global chart.

SB19 — 'VISA' · released 20 February 2026 · debuted #6 on the U.S. World Digital Song Sales chart · 3 months in flight globally.

“Filipino artists, athletes, and professionals all face the same challenges with visa processes.”

A decade ago — before SB19 — the same visa wall already stood.

A personal note before the policy ask.

This advocacy isn't new for me.

In 2014 I was a BPO call center agent. I was also part of a Filipino dance cover group called Se-Eon with Stell, winning regional competitions on our own savings.

That same year, Stell and I met BTS backstage — during their early 'Danger' era, before they became the biggest band in the world.

They had state-backed scaffolding when they crossed borders. Filipino artists had nothing. We were on our own.

The song 'VISA' is one expression of that thinking. This meeting is another.

The framework is already signed. The mobility chapter is missing.

Three current Marcos-administration instruments already cover creative-industry development. None addresses outbound mobility.

Korea built five mobility instruments. PH has none.

Side-by-side: the export-support tools Korea built between 1998–2010, and their status in the Philippines today.

INSTRUMENT	KOREA	PHILIPPINES
Dedicated content-export agency	KOCCA (2009)	—
State-backed bilateral cultural treaties	20+ co-production agreements	—
DFA endorsement protocol for artists	Through MOFA cultural attachés	Ad hoc, request-by-request
Visa fast-track / talent-mobility track	E-6 reciprocity, MOFA support	—
Standalone music-export budget	KRW 1 trillion KOCCA budget (2024)	Not in PCIDP MC 103

TAKEAWAY Four of five instruments don't exist on the PH side. The mobility pillar belongs in the PCIDP IRR update.

Three ways to add a mobility pillar to the PCIDP.

Graded by ambition and timeline. The senator picks what fits.

OPTION A

Convene a Senate hearing.

Lowest-cost move

- Senate Committee on Culture & the Arts
- Calls DFA + DTI + NCCA to the table
- Public · builds record · generates momentum

30 – 60 days · minimal cost

OPTION B

Push the IRR amendment.

Surgical option

- Direct request to DTI + NCCA
- Adds Mobility Pillar to PCIDP IRR
- We provide draft IRR language

6 – 12 months · no new appropriation

OPTION C

File the bill.

Legacy move — you as principal author

- Creative Workers Mobility Act
- Codifies the Mobility Pillar in statute
- Permanent inter-agency body

1 – 2 years · carries the next decade

*We'd want majority cover. We trust your judgment on the co-author.

You already solved this for the athletes. Filipino artists are asking for the same.

“

*We have tremendous talent and potential to conquer the global gaming arena, which is why we worked with the eSports community to organize PeSPA and to resolve visa issues when they compete abroad.

— SEN. BAM AQUINO, ON PESPA AND FILIPINO ESPORTS · 2017

You organized PeSPA. You authored Senate Resolution 276. The athletes you championed already have the playbook you built.
The creative economy is already four times the BPO workforce.

*You've already done it for the athletes. We came to you because nobody else has built this lane.
